U.S. Broadband Access by County

DATA SOURCE: FCC 2016 BROADBAND PROGRESS REPORT

This dynamic map shows the proportion of individuals who have access to broadband in each county in the US, based on the Federal Communications Commission's Broadband Progress Report 2016.

The lighter the color the lower the broadband access in that county.

23.4 million Americans in rural communities lack broadband internet access.

In the United States 99.73% of the population has access to Broadband Internet and the average home download speed is 6.70215 Mbps. 2.97% of the population does not have access to wired broadband Internet Access.

An illustration on the left side of the slide shows a pair of silver scissors cutting through a black cable. The cable has a copper-colored connector at the top. The scissors are positioned vertically, with the blades open and the cable being cut in the middle.

Microsoft's Airband Initiative

Microsoft has partnered with Network Business Systems with a plan to eliminate the rural broadband gap in the US over a 5 year span. The Initiative includes bringing internet access to 2 million residents, along with providing technology training and investing in new tech programs that will benefit rural areas.

On Thursday, September 13, 2018, the two companies announced their partnership in an effort to bring internet service to around 126,700 residents in rural communities throughout Iowa, Illinois, and South Dakota.
